INTERVIEWER And now, what's your ideal job? Some people think they've got the ideal job, and we're going to talk to two of them. Our first guest is Freddie Brookes and he's a test driver. So, what exactly do you do, Freddie?

FREDDIE When car companies produce a new model of car, they have to test it to find out if there are any problems. That's what I do.

INTERVIEWER What does the job involve?

FREDDIE I have to drive the car in all sorts of different conditions – in cities, up and down hills, in rain, in deserts and so on.

INTERVIEWER What do you like about your job?

FREDDIE I've always been interested in cars and I love driving. I travel to some interesting places to test the cars, too.

INTERVIEWER Is there anything that you don't like?

FREDDIE Well, I have to test the cars in all sorts of places. Some of those places can be very uncomfortable. Some places are very hot, some are very cold or wet. It can be dangerous, too, because I have to drive very fast in snow and on ice.

INTERVIEWER Well, thank you, Freddie ... and our next guest is Megan Tring. She's a film critic. Welcome to the programme, Megan. What exactly do you do?

MEGAN I watch new movies and I write about them for newspapers and magazines.

INTERVIEWER What does your job involve?

MEGAN Well, I have to watch a lot of films, of course, but I also interview people in the film industry, like actors and directors.

INTERVIEWER Why do you like your job?

MEGAN Well, I love watching movies. I wanted to be an actress when I was younger. I meet a lot of very interesting people, too. And I go to film festivals in different countries.

INTERVIEWER What don't you like about the job?

MEGAN I have to watch a lot of films, so I spend a lot of time sitting in the dark. Most films are about two hours long, and some these days last three hours. So it takes a long time to watch a few films. Some of those films aren't very good, but I have to watch them whether they're good or bad.

INTERVIEWER Thank you, Megan ... now can I ask Freddie about driving skills?
